

DECR chairman expresses support for French Christians coming out against another attack on traditional ethical values

Metropolitan Hilarion of Volokolamsk, head of the Moscow Patriarchate's Department for External Church Relations, has sent a letter to Cardinal André Vingt-Trois, Archbishop of Paris, president of the Bishops' Conference in France, expressing support and readiness of the Moscow Patriarchate to work together for the defence of Christian values. Below is the full text of the letter:

Your Eminence,

I am writing to you disturbed by reports coming from France about a bill drafted by the ruling Socialist Party, which provides for the legalization of same-sex marriages. By this letter I would like to express solidarity and support for your consistent and uncompromising position which represents truly the Christian view of this problem.

Regrettably, we can see how moral principles to be observed in private and public life are eroding in a country with deep Christian roots. I would like to assure Your Eminence that the Moscow Patriarchate is ready to work together with the Bishops' Conference in France to protect the gospel's ethical values.

It is gratifying that the French in their faithfulness to traditional morality have not remained indifferent to the French authorities' initiative unacceptable to Christians. Evidence to it are numerous demonstrations held recently in several cities of the republic against the legalization of same-sex cohabitation. I hope that the healthy forces of the French society will continue to actively defend the traditional morality.

Using this opportunity, I wish Your Eminence good health, spiritual strength and fortitude and God's help in your work.

With love in the Lord,

+ Hilarion

Metropolitan of Volokolamsk
