

An old church in Granada is officially transferred to the Russian Orthodox community

January 23, 2021, a ceremony of the official transfer of the 16th century church of St. Bartholomew to the local Russian Orthodox community took place in Granada, Spain.

The agreement on the transfer was signed in furtherance of accords reached at the meeting of Archbishop Nestor of Madrid and Lisbon, a hierarch of the Russian Orthodox Church, with His Excellency Francisco Javier Martínez Fernández, the Archbishop of Granada, on October 13.

The transfer ceremony began after the divine service at St. Bartholomew church celebrated by Archbishop Nestor. Archpriest Andrei Kordochkin, secretary of the diocesan administration, archpriest Maksim Prikhodko, archpriest Mikhail Ustimenko, and deacon Gleb Zaika concelebrated.

At the ceremony, Archbishop Nestor expressed profound gratitude to Archbishop Francisco Javier Martínez Fernández for his assistance to the local parish of the Russian Orthodox Church in getting the place for worship.
